WHOEVER HEARD OF A GIRL BEING NAMED "MELVIN?"

DANNY THE DINOSAUR

"TRA la tra la tra la," hummed Danny the Dinosaur merrily, as he bumbled his way between rocks and over little streams and down hills.

"Tra la tra la ooops," and he found himself rolling head over heels, end over end, down a long sandy path. When he finally got to the bottom, he sat up, looked to see that his tail was all in one piece, and said to himself, "Whew, that was a surprise. Don't remember seeing that hill before."

Then from a place just beside his left leg came a deep, hoarse voice saying, "Times have changed, Danny, since you were around last. Glad to see you again. How did you enjoy your nap?"

"Oh fine, why, it was just grand. Why, I'll bet I slept a million and a half years!" Danny would have told all about that funny dream he had, when he looked down and suddenly spied the owner of the deep voice. When he saw who it was, he screamed in his high, shrill voice, "Why, Terrence the Turtle! Why, my goodness gracious. Tell me . . . how are you, and how are things, and how is all your family?"

"Fine," said Terrence, who never talked much. "But right now, there is a very serious matter I have to attend to. You'll pardon me," and Terrence started to run away. Well, run away isn't exactly the right word, because all Danny the Dinosaur had to do was move over just a little to block his path.

"What serious matter?" Danny asked. When Terrance pretended to pay no attention to him at all, Danny really shouted, "WHAT SERIOUS MATTER, TERRENCE? Now answer me!"

Terrence stopped, and when he finally answered Danny, he spoke in a very exasperated way. "Danny, you know very well that you've been asleep for a long time. Well, I don't suppose I can blame you for that . . . since you are a dinosaur and all, but I've been up and about for all time and, well, you're bound to find out that times do change, you know."

"Yes, yes, I know," answered Danny, very aware that he was known among the animals who didn't like him very well as "old sleepyhead". "But what is your problem now? Maybe if you'll wait a minute and tell me, I might be able to help you. After all, I am still pretty strong," he said with pride.

Terrence the Turtle thought it over for a long time, and then he said half to himself, "Yes, maybe you might help after all. I'll tell you about it."

Danny laid on his stomach so he could get his ear closer to Terrence's head, which had been halfway into his shell when he was thinking, and settled down for a long story.

"Well," Terrence began, "you know that out here on the desert, everybody gets along pretty well with everybody else."

"Mmm-humm," agreed Danny.

"And you remember that the only one of all of us that anybody really was afraid of was . . ."

"Hook, the Hawk," finished Danny, trembling just a little as he said the name. "Don't tell me he's still around after all these years?"

"No, not Hook himself, but his grandson Hook Hawk II. And," Terrence's voice dropped, so nobody else could hear, "he's even worse than Hook Senior ever was!"

"Well, if it's just a problem of nest-breaking, why doesn't somebody . . ."

"It's worse than that," Terrence woefully explained. "Hook says every bird and animal in the desert must give him half their food. And you know what that means."

"I sure do," Danny nodded seriously. "That means that we'll all have to move out and leave our homes, 'cause there just isn't that much food to go around."

"That's right, Danny" said Terrence sadly.

And the two animals just sat in the sand. Danny let two large tears creep down his face, and Terrence had poked his head so far into his shell, that you couldn't see him crying at all.

Danny poked Terrence's shell with one paw and asked, "When is Hook II supposed to collect all the food, Terrence?"

"This afternoon at four o'clock, and I just can't get going fast enough to help out. The other animals are doing the best they can . . . you know, picking up scraps here and there to add to the amount, but you know how long that will take."

"Yes, but what time is it now? My watch stopped years ago."

Terrence looked directly overhead at the sun and said, "It's noon now. But I really don't see . . ."

"It's just a matter of clever planning," said Danny, and smiled just thinking about his plan. "I guess we can manage it, if we have Desert Rat and Chipmunk and all the gang to help out."

"You mean you've thought up a way to stop Hook Hawk from taking all the food?"

"I think I have, and we have just enough time to do it." Then Danny explained to Terrence, "there's an old water hole that's just over a few hills from here. It was pretty low when I went to sleep years ago, so it must be about dried up by now."

"I think I know the one you mean, though it's a pretty long trip for me . . . but," Terrence added hopefully, "I think we can get the fellows to help. Just tell me what you want them to do."

"Well, they'll have to gather up every bit of food that they're supposed to put out for Hawk, and take it over to the dry water hole. I'll meet you over there."

Before the sun had gotten very much farther in the sky, hundreds of little animals and birds were busy bringing all they could carry to the old water hole that Terrence had told them about. Danny stood by the white sand and in between greeting all his old friends, he was very busy giving instructions to everyone to roll each little bit of food in the very whitest part of the sand they could find.

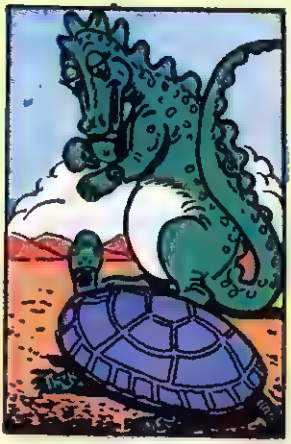
"But, Danny," Desert Rat argued, "what's rolling this food in the sand going to do?"

"Yes, Danny," Chipmunk cried. "Hook Hawk will just blow all the sand off before he eats it up."

"But don't you see . . ." Danny told them all, and his eyes twinkled with glee, "This isn't sand at all. It's really salt from all the water that's dried up here. And have you ever eaten anything that's been all rolled in salt? Ugh!"

"Ugh is right," said Desert Rat seriously, remembering a time when he had done just that.

"Then let's get busy, fellows,"



Danny reminded them. And they all did their jobs and started back as soon as they could.

When the hour of four o'clock approached, all the little animals had big smiles on their faces, as they saw a speck appear in the sky, and as it grew closer, they could see it surely was Hook Hawk II coming to carry away his loot.

Hook flew to the ground, ruffled his tail feathers, and looked around at all the animals meanly. "Well, I see you're all ready," he hissed, "so I'll just put all the food here in this bag and carry it away with me right now."

When his eye lit on the pile of whitened food, his beak turned up in a grim smile. "Why, all this food looks real good. Looks like you put sugar on it just for me. I think I'll have a piece right now." And Hook reached out and gobbled up a large piece of salted cactus root.

"Ugh!" he sputtered when the dry salt taste reached his stomach. "Ugh! Ugh! What have you done to me? This is awful!"

And just then Danny the Dinosaur stepped out from behind a rock where he was hiding and laughed right in Hook Hawk II's face.

"Up to your old tricks, hey, Hawk?" said Danny. "You're just like your mean old grandfather, I'm sorry to say."

"Danny the Dinosaur!" Hook gasped. "Ugh . . . I might have known . . . ugh . . . water! I can't stand it . . . WATER!"

"Oh, you won't get any water here, Hook, old boy," Danny told him, winking at Terrence. "I'm afraid you'll have to go way up in the mountains for water," he called out after Hawk, who had dropped his bag of food and was flying off toward the mountains and sputtering. "And you'd better not come back again either," Danny shouted.

When all Danny's friends clustered around him to thank him, Danny said grandly, "Why, now, that's quite all right fellows . . . and this food will be all right too after we wash it all off." And all the animals laughed when Danny said, "and I don't think Hook Hawk will be back again for a long time, unless he wants a very salty welcome!"

Beads Contain Water FROM THE Miraculous Fountain at Lourdes

THE EXACT PLACE WHERE ST. BERNADETTE SAW THE VISION OF THE BLESSED VIRGIN MARY!

IMAGINE — actually holding in your hand, touching with your fingers, beads containing water from the Miraculous Fountain at Lourdes, France — the exact place where St. Bernadette saw the Vision of Our Blessed Mother! The 2nd, 3rd, and 4th (Hail Mary) beads of this unusual new Rosary actually contain water from the Fountain at Lourdes. You actually SEE the water itself — permanently sealed in the transparent plastic beads! You'll feel closer than ever to the Blessed Virgin Mary when you say this Rosary because Our Blessed Mother created the Spring from which this water was taken!

WHAT HELP DO YOU NEED?

Now YOU can say this special Rosary, with 3 beads filled with Lourdes water, to help you gain special favors, graces, blessings, to deepen your understanding of the Rosary and bring you closer to Our Blessed Mother! Motion pictures, articles, plays, stories, radio programs—all have brought to millions of every faith the heart-warming story of little Bernadette and her Vision of the Holy Lady.

HOW THE MIRACLE HAPPENED!

A vision of A Lovely Lady appeared to Bernadette as she was searching for firewood. The Lady ordered Bernadette to dig. The little girl did dig . . . and a fresh, cool spring came bubbling up out of the ground. Sick people who bathed in this water grew well, and many of the blind could see again! "Build here," said the Lovely Lady, "a great church. And tell people to pray and do penance and walk in processions." This was done and soon the wonderful Shrine of Lourdes was built. The Spring is still there at Lourdes, France and is visited by millions of pilgrims from all over the world!

Never — Never Before a Rosary Like This!

The special water-filled beads are made of clear, transparent polystyrene plastic, so that you not only FEEL the beads but actually SEE the water inside. These three special beads are made slightly larger than the other beads of the Rosary so that a generous supply of Lourdes water could be sealed in! The Rosary itself is a masterpiece of elegance. It is exquisitely cut with scintillating flame polished, simulated crystal beads. Linked together with tarnish-proof metal chain. Beautifully crafted drooping head Cornus is on brilliant metal cross. Your choice of Diamond Clear Beads, Sapphire Blue Beads or Black Ebony Beads. Only $2.98 each, 2 for $5.00 postpaid.
